Cupid's Pipes

By MARION DEXTER.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Jan Vanderstreet was without doubt and by unanimous consent, especially his own, the leading citizen of the little painted village of Dykheid.

Therefore when he imparted to his fellow citizens the information that he had bought a large tract of land in America, where fortunes were to be made in an incredible hurry, half a hundred very substantial and phlegmatic Hollanders marshaled their families after grave deliberation and embarked with him, after selling their queer little painted houses and tulip gardens and cows with true Dutch thrift.

Jan Vanderstreet took with him his wonderful collection of pipes, famed throughout all Gelderland and even beyond that beautiful district. He also took with him what he valued almost as much as his pipes—his very buxom and still blooming wife, his blooming daughter, Ankie, and his blooming orphaned niece, Johanna de Koop.

The only member of the party of Holland adventurers who was not truly substantial, according to sound Dutch standards, was Dirk Van Pelt. Myneheer Vanderstreet had frowned on his admission as a member of the solemn exodus. But Dirk had cunningly used such un-Hollandish haste in putting his entire patrimony of $1,000 into the speculation that he had an interest in it before the more deliberate myneheer knew it.

Jan Vanderstreet did not like this at all. The trouble was that Dirk was altogether too fond of Ankie. If the broad shouldered, sturdy, handsome youth had only exhibited enough sense to be fond of some one not in the Vanderstreet family the myneheer might have felt quite glad to have him in the party, for Dirk was not at all disagreeable to anybody, with his kind smile and his readiness to help every one who needed it.

Myneheer Vanderstreet determined to keep close watch during the voyage. But what could one do on shipboard? Could a worthy Dutchman of five and sixty be expected to go on guard over his daughter when all the men folk were smoking their pipes on deck, telling tales of the past and speculating about the future? Truly not.

The chaperonage of Ankie was therefore left to her mother. But even on shipboard that industrious Dutch housewife could not be idle, and when one has a huge stocking and a ball of yarn, also a set of knitting needles, in hand it is not always convenient to follow a will-of-the-wisp of a girl.

Besides, Johanna was always with her cousin, and loveliness when a third person is present is not so easy to carry on. At least so argued Mistress Vanderstreet, forgetting that there is a language of the eye which expresses as clearly as speech what is in one's heart and that a pressure of the hand may convey an assurance of love just as plainly as if one said aloud, "I love you."

Although Dirk had little opportunity of telling Ankie of his love by word of mouth, that he was her devoted slave and wished for no greater happiness than to call her his wife, Ankie knew what was in his heart, because she returned his love.

By the end of the voyage Dirk knew that her heart was in his keeping, and he determined to wrest from the soil of the prairie a living that would entitle him to old Vanderstreet's respect.

Busy days followed the arrival of the Hollanders in the little Iowa settlement. Ground was broken, teams purchased, grain sowed and houses erected.

The Vanderstreet residence was the most pretentious in the place, but the cottage built by Dirk Van Pelt was as pretty a little Dutch home as any romantic girl would wish.

Vines were planted and soon grew about the porch, a bed of tulips flaunted gayly colored blossoms in the front yard, and a kitchen garden flourished in the rear.

Things soon prospered with Dirk, and after six months of anxious waiting he ventured to call on Jan Vanderstreet. The myneheer, with unusual promptness, immediately gave Dirk to understand that he wished to hear no more of the matter and very politely intimated that the doors of the Vanderstreet residence would be closed therefrom to him.

Disappointed, but not discouraged, Dirk went slowly home, vowing to himself with genuine Holland determination that he would never give up the girl he loved.

His resolution was strengthened by the sight of Ankie standing at the window holding out a letter, which she dropped and he picked up.

The letter told him that she would be his, with or without her father's blessing, and bade him have patience. Dirk continued to work his little place industriously, hoping to hear from Ankie. But three weeks elapsed before he had an opportunity of talking with her. He left her presence, feeling much encouraged, and fell asleep that night more hopeful. He was awakened from sweet dreams of his love by the cry of fire.

Throwing on his clothes, he rushed from the house. The town was already aroused, and down the streets the people came running in all stages of dress, the clatter of their wooden shoes making as much noise as the modern fire engine.

"It is Jan Vanderstreet's!" some one screamed. "The place is doomed!"

On hearing these words Dirk ran faster than before and outstripped the crowd. When he reached the house he found the family coming out, laden with plunder, and heard Mistress Vanderstreet exclaim: "No more must we go back! It is not safe, and it is better to lose one's goods than one's life!"

"But my pipes! My precious pipes!" cried old Jan, all his phlegmatic restfulness gone. "I must get them!"

"That you shall not do. Everything is afire. I will not let you risk your life for a set of worthless pipes."

"Worthless pipes!" thundered Jan. "How dare you speak so? They are a part of my life. I have been collecting them all my life long, until now more than a hundred hang in my rack. And must I lose them all because of your hard headedness? Let me go, I say; let me go!"

He struggled wildly in her grasp, but it was in vain. Mistress Vanderstreet was a very strong and a nobly determined woman and held him in so firm a grip he could do naught but writhe and groan.

Dirk Van Pelt had a great emotion and reached a great determination with an almost American swiftness. He knew that the rafters of the blazing house would fall in soon—might tumble in crimson ruin at any moment. But not in vain did he have in his veins the blood of the wonderful race that cut the dikes and drowned their beloved land rather than yield it to the invaders.

He went to a tank of water and wet his coat. Throwing it over his head, he plunged into the burning house, not heeding the shrill cry of distress which issued from the lips of the trembling Ankie.

Five minutes of dreadful suspense followed, during which the rafters fell in and sent the sparks flying upward in a mad shower. Surely no one could live in such a place. Ankie, moaning piteously, sank to the ground, heedless of the crowd of spectators, and burst out into wild weeping.

Suddenly a shout of joy arrested her attention, and sitting up, she saw through a mist of tears the form of Dirk issuing from the burning house. He staggered like a drunken man under the weight of a huge sack which held the precious pipes, not one of which was missing.

Straight to the man who had refused him his daughter's hand stumbled Dirk Van Pelt. Then as old Jan took the burden from him the young man fell senseless at his feet.

When he opened his eyes, Jan Vanderstreet was standing by him, tears streaming down his cheeks. He took Dirk's hand, saying brokenly: "A house one can soon acquire, but such a treasure of pipes—ah, that takes a very lifetime to acquire. Such a deed as yours, Dirk, is worthy of any reward. What can I do to repay you?"

Raising himself on his elbow, Dirk summoned Ankie, who was hovering near. Then, with a determined glance, he signified to her father what reward he wished.

"So," said Jan slowly, "you still want Ankie? I have already told you she was not for you, but—take her, Dirk Van Pelt. She is yours. Ah, what a collection of pipes! What coloring! What noble bowls and what grand stems!"

"Ankie is worth all the pipes that ever were made or ever will be made," protested the happy lover, holding her hand tightly in his own and gazing adoringly into her tender blue eyes.

"Perhaps so, perhaps so," muttered Jan absently, "but such pipes as mine!" He turned and summoned a man to help him carry the sack of matches pipes to a place of safety and left the lovers still laughing happily into each other's eyes.

Arbitrated.

Conversation among travelers is frequently absurdly trivial. After several days together, as on shipboard, every one is idle and talks about the most unimportant matters with the deepest interest. R. H. Milligan in a book entitled "The Jungle Folk of Africa" recounts with what complacency the conclusion was reached that the thirteen colonies should never have rebelled and that the blame was all on the side of England.

One man, moreover, disclosed the fact that he always wore safety pins instead of garters and such enthusiasm for his preference with such enthusiasm that he made at least one convert.

One night we put in practice the principle of arbitration, of which we were all adherents. An argument had arisen among us as to which was the more simple of the two currency systems, dollars and cents or pounds, shillings and pence. At last, the captain arriving, we decided to refer the matter to him and to surrender our judgment to his arbitration.

The captain, an Englishman of the very stolid sort, after a period of reflection replied very slowly and with all the gravity of a judge:

"Pounds, shillings and pence is the simpler system, for don't you know that when you are told the price of a thing in dollars and cents you always have to convert it into pounds, shillings and pence?"

There was a little objection to this theory, but in general it was perfectly satisfactory so long as the voyage lasted.

To Tie a Mare.

A horseman makes the following suggestion: "If mares are to be tied at the time the colt suckles, the proper way to tie them is to run a halter strap through a piece of old rubber hose. Have a snap in the strap to fasten to the halter, keeping another strap near by with a snap on the end to use when the mare is taken out, and leave the strap and hose fastened to the manger. Tying in this way will prevent the colt from becoming entangled in the tie strap and choked."

Pendexter-Rooks.

The home of Mrs. Lizzie H. Pendexter in Denmark was the scene of a pretty wedding July 4th. The contracting parties were Minnie E. Rooks of Beverly, Mass., and Elwood L. Pendexter of Randolph. The rooms were artistically decorated. The bride and groom stood within an arch of evergreen and roses from which was suspended a bell of daisies.

The bride and groom were attended by Nina Sturtevant of Beverly, Mass., niece of the bride, and Arthur C. Pendexter of Portland, brother of the bridegroom. Rev. A. M. Smith of Brownfield performed the ceremony, the double ring service being used.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held, and ice cream, cake and punch were served. The bride was prettily attired in pearl handmaiden and carried a shower bouquet of water lilies. The bridesmaid was gowned in white net over white silk and carried red roses.

The gifts were many and beautiful. Mr. Pendexter was formerly a Denmark boy, being the elder son of the late Chas. O. Pendexter. He has recently purchased the grocery business of the late H. W. Peasey of Randolph, where Mr. and Mrs. Pendexter will make their home.

The Buckboard.

Though the name "buckboard" is applied to thousands of carriages, few people know how the word came to be used.

Back around 1820, says the American Vehicle, in explaining it, when the transportation of goods, wages and merchandise was almost entirely by wagon, a Dr. Buck, who for many years, afterwards was the military storekeeper at Washington, was in charge of military stores en route to army posts in the southwest.

In East Tennessee much difficulty was experienced by reason of the rough roads, and there were frequent mishaps, mostly from the wagons overturning.

Dr. Buck overhauled the outfit, and, abandoning the wagon bodies, long box boards were set directly on the axles or hung below, and the stores were loaded in such a manner that there was no further delays from break-downs, and the stores safely reached their destinations.

In special emergency, too, the load could be shifted or taken off in a hurry.

The idea was probably not new, but Dr. Buck's example was followed, especially when roads were rough, and soon much hauling was done by the use of wheels, axles and boards only.

Now were the buckboard, both in carriages and automobile forms, conforming closely to the original idea, though few suspect the source of it.

Comparative Value of Milk.

It will surprise the majority of people when they are told that one quart of milk contains as much digestible nutrients as are contained in any one of the following:

In one pound of beef chuck.

In one-half pound of beef loin.

In one-half pound of beef ribs.

In one-half pound mutton leg.

In nine ounces of beef tongue.

In two pounds of codfish.

In two pounds five ounces of solid oysters.

It takes two pounds five ounces of bluefish or one pound five ounces of potatoes to equal one quart of whole milk in digestible nutrient value.

Florence O. Hastings, daughter of Sheriff and Mrs. D. R. Hastings of Auburn, has been entertaining eight of her Wellesley college mates at a house party at Hastings in the Wild River and Mountain region of Oxford county. They caught 216 trout. They climbed the mountains, went in bathing and did everything which the camping life affords for sport.

One stalk of strawberries from E. L. Rooks and Sons had nine large ripe strawberries and as many more small green ones, the bunch weighing one-fourth of a pound.

Riches in Alberta Wheat

"Get In" While You Can

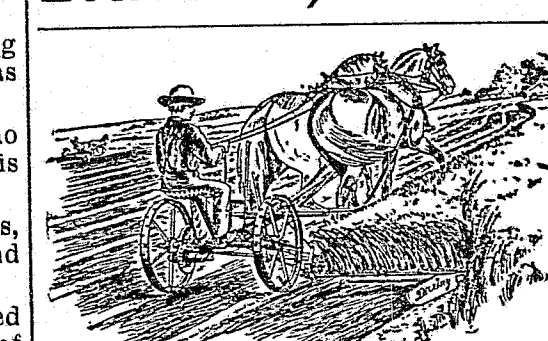

The phenomenal agricultural and financial possibilities of winter wheat raising in "sunny" southern Alberta, the last best west in northwestern Canada, is already widely known, and thousands of families are flocking into this agricultural El Dorado. Immense acreages, immensely rich soil, immensely great crops grown, harvested and marketed at marvellously little expense spells quick and lasting success for prompt activity there; the experience of men already on the spot PROVES this—with net profits in winter wheat now ranging from $15 to $22 per acre.

....PUT A LITTLE IN....

....TAKE A LOT OUT....

From $0 to $20 per cent. on the money invested is not unusual in Alberta wheat raising. A farming syndicate just formed by me is already devoting $60 acres of Alberta soil to "Alberta red," the record winter wheat of this section; now I am forming a second syndicate, each member to put in a little cash, to buy up another undeveloped Alberta section. If I hear from you BY RETURN MAIL I can "let you in" on this syndicate at bottom price; can make you a sharer in the most profitable land deal known in America for years. Write me TODAY for facts and figures which prove the genuine value of this proposition and its positive enhancement. A special landseakers' excursion is to start soon for Alberta; will you go? ### The New Water System.

A crew of fifty men are at work on the water system about to be installed at this place. It is hoped, the result of their industry will prove as labor saving as the electric light has become.

The Little Red School House.

One of the most pleasant gatherings of the season was at the little red school house in Bisbee town July 5th, where a reunion was held for all that ever taught or attended school there and their families. The day set for this gathering was July 3rd but on account of the hard rain was postponed until the 5th. A most bountiful dinner was spread on the table under the trees beside of the school house where 62 partook of the many delicacies.

Linwood Flint had a little stand where he served orangeade free to everyone and all they could drink.

Some beautiful flowers were brought that were arranged into bouquets to decorate the graves of our schoolmates and friends in the cemetery across the road.

Mrs. Anna and Rebecca Fluke decorated the front of the school house with flags and a large motto over the window with the word "reunion".

After dinner was over all went to the schoolroom where a poem written for the occasion by Mrs. Ellen Millett Davenport of Worcester, Mass., was read by Mrs. Annie Paige Hazelton.

Some of the old time games were played, a reunion annually and the day set to be the last Saturday in June. Linwood Flint was nominated as President, Mrs. Evelyn Fluke Green, Vice President and Mrs. Annie Paige Hazelton, Secretary.

Some of the old time games were played, four cornered goal, tag goal and round the green carpet, same as we did in our school days.

The following is a list of those present and the poem. Bert and Linwood Flint, Mrs. Martha Flint, A. E. Morse, B. Hersey and daughter Fannie, Charles Hersey, wife and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Stone and son Harold from Lovell, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Hutchins of Albany, Ernest Stone, Albany, Lulu and Alice McIntire, " "

B. Hamlin, Portland, E. N. Watson, Norway, Mrs. M. J. Bisbee and son Leon, Fred Davis, Norway, Newell Andrews, M. M. Hamlin and sister Elvira, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Morse and three children, Mrs. Edna Jordan, Mrs. Rilla Marston, Mrs. Pearl Hatch and two children, Mrs. Bernice Littlefield and son.

Mr. and Mrs. Mell Knight and son, Mrs. Ella Charles, Edgar and Nettie Shedd, Mr. and Mrs. Will Fluke, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Dresser, Mrs. Evelyn Green and two children, Mrs. Annie Hazelton, Mrs. Louisa Knight and daughter Edith, Mrs. Effie Lord and three children, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Allister, Fidelia Watson and Harry Morey.

For "And Sang Syne"

When I heard of the celebration, I was down in the town at the edge of the nation, how they were coming in every direction, all kinds of folk, from every where, and everybody that ever was born.

Was going to start at the peep o' dawn, leaving their homes and their kindred, and hike it over to Bisbee town, making believe they were young once more, telling all their stories and their shame, shaking hands with each bitterest foe; for we were all here, and we were all here, near the waters of Crooked river and Papoose pond.

We had a link to strengthen the bond, and rivet the links of the friendly chain that circles the home of Bisbee town, Maine. It was just like the old country days, a long string of teams from everywhere, over the old road, down to Gambo, where they all met, and then on to the beach, all happy valley and all Savin Hill, from the Flat and the City, all came with a song.

And if they noticed that people started, "The Grand old one lived there," they declared, "Everyone proud of the time and the place; it was just like the old country days, a long string of teams from everywhere, over the old road, down to Gambo, where they all met, and then on to the beach, all happy valley and all Savin Hill, from the Flat and the City, all came with a song."

Radcliffe, 4; Bryant Pond, 1.

Radcliffe's victory at the fair grounds last Saturday afternoon put the Bryant Pond team under water for the third time, and dashed to the rocks any fond hope they might have been nursing concerning an easy walkover with Uncle Bill and his loving nephews.

A statement was made after the game of June 12, to the effect that "with a fair umpire the Pond delegation could give the Radcliffe a hard run, making the contest decidedly warm." Such things failed to materialize last Saturday for Radcliffe had it easy from the start; in fact the outcome of the afternoon's sport was never in doubt and the awful mauling hinted never crept from its concealment to show its fiery disposition.

The visitors appeared with two new players, Rawson and Titcomb of South Paris, who supplied at first base and short stop positions, otherwise the line up was the same as has been produced here before. This team were the first batters up and opened with a first attempt to land scores of runs. Jimmy Farnum started the wedge by cracking out a clean hit but misjudged the condition of Lanan's arm so got his on an attempt to steal second.

Titcomb and Cole fanned so there was nothing on. This condition of affairs continued right up to the eighth inning, when the Pond boys caught their only run. With one gone Jimmy Farnum placed out his third hit for the day, winning the first base, was advanced on a fielder's choice then scored, when Clason fumbled Fred Farnum's fly, which would have been an easy one for Lafance, who was ready and waiting for it to land.

The Radcliffe bunch scored in only two innings but this was sufficient to create a safe lead which couldn't or rather didn't give the opponents a stimulus to equal. In their first inning the Pond team rapped a high one to Jimmy Farnum in left field for a put out. Clason was passed, Lanan secured a hit, advancing Clason to third. Young pushed one to Titcomb but got first safely, thus scoring Clason and Lanan, who made it clean by fast sprinting against odds.

There was nothing more in the run getting until the fourth, then Young singled, Gammon laid down a perfect bunt for a safety, Lowell got possession of first on a fielder's choice and the Pond team were comfortably filled. Young scored on J. Farnum's catch of Lafance's high one, King popped up one which Rawson smothered but Harrison landed out a timely hit, bringing in Gammon, who chalked the last score for Radcliffe.

Manager Leith showed good judgment in selecting Louis Clark of South Paris as umpire during the absence of Hiram Libby, the regular official. Mr. Clark thoroughly understands the game and rendered decisions in a clear and impartial manner which won the approval of both players and spectators. If there is any howl coming from this young man's work, the cause for resentment must be far fetched. He certainly did the fair and impartial thing and was right.

One amusing feature was brought to light when the visitors attempted stealing second during the first two innings, thinking catcher Lanan's game arm was constructed like a wooden lid out of competition. This delusion was rudely dispelled after two squatters were neatly trapped, even though the elbow joint worked much after the manner of a rusty hinge on a barn door. The score:

In Extreme Hot Weather.

Fish, Birds and Animals All Suffer by The Heat Just as Men Do.

"Humans," said a nature lover, "are by no means the only sufferers from intense summer heat; there are plenty of lower creatures that suffer."

Fish, for instance, are oppressed by the heat just as men are, and if they can't find shelter from it they may be killed by it. In shallow fresh water ponds fish sometimes die by the hundred, killed by the excessive heat of the water, warmed beyond their endurance by the beating sun.

"In streams fish seek the shady stretches and the deep places and the spring holes where they can keep cool, and in salt water fish go away from the shallow over-heated water close to shore and seek the cooler depths."

Birds suffer in the same way, oppressed by extreme heat, and how they do wait for a chance to get cool! Look at the sparrows in the city's streets when the sprinkling cart goes by leaving in the hollows of the pavement little pools of water that will serve for bathing places. How eagerly the sparrows seek this bath, and it will bathe, if it gets the chance, a dozen times a day.

"It is just the same with domestic fowls. Extreme hot weather distresses them greatly; at such a time you can see chickens with their beaks open and then they want plenty of water."

"Cows? Of course. On the very hot days they seek the trees if there are any in the pasture lot, to stand in the shade of them, and then if they are bothered by flies the cows seek the shaded pools and brooks to stand in them in water up to their bellies or deeper to escape the flies and for cooling refreshment. How horses and dogs suffer with intense heat everybody knows."

St. Rocco Day.

The celebration held each year by Marco Lavorgna at the fair grounds Canton, in memory of Saint Rocco, is always looked forward to by the people of this section of the State with pleasure as the fireworks in the evening are the best that are ever set off in the State. This year the celebration will be held Aug. 11th.

"Sky Pilot" used to be the sailor's phrase for preacher but now it has come to mean aeronaut. So, too, probably, in a few years "sailor" will mean a member of the crew of an airplane. These sailors will frequently be stranded, no doubt, on the roofs of skyscrapers.

Shall Graduating Classes Travel?

Shall the graduating class travel seems to be the question. No one disputes that travel broadens the ideas of most of people and gives them a touch of the world, but how much of travel should be included in the school curriculum?

Outside of the travel the pupil may read in books, many claim, they should wait till after their school days are finished and they are in a position to travel or not as they may choose.

Of course it is a good thing to visit our State capital, to visit our National capital, to visit throughout our country and other countries. However much a trip to Europe or around the world might be desired, would it not be better for the rich and poor student alike to wait till after they get through with the school work?

A great many things in this life may be desirable but we can only do one thing at a time and it would undoubtedly be better to finish school in a good and approved way and then travel.

It has been said, unfortunately many parents are not well enough off in worldly goods to meet the expense of travel. To many it is a sacrifice to send their children to school. This they willingly do for the sake of better equipping their children for the struggle for a living that they know so well. Many a mother has gone without a new dress or the father without a new suit or overcoat that the boy or girl might go through the High School.

Now in view of this would it not be better if the classes wish to travel to Washington to wait till they were out of school a year before the trip. They would then have time enough to earn their own money to make the trip, and if it is such a bagatelle as the boy writing the ADVERTISER from Berlin or the girl from Fryeburg they could save up the amount easily. It would be better to in every way for they would have the discipline of earning and saving the money, their parents would be relieved of the expense, they could enjoy the trip better and absorb the educational features more after they had counted the cost by earning the money before they spent it.

One thing more, give us same graduation. The towns provide a schoolroom to educate the children, let the towns provide a place for them to graduate, but let the towns through officers, take the entire charge of that graduation. Let the idea of one class outshining its predecessors be done away with, only so far as their mental abilities count. A new dress or hat even is not needed, for few of the high school pupils do not have neat and well looking clothing.

They do not need a band or souvenir program. Singing and music by the schools or individual members would be many times better than what the parents and friends would enjoy. Let the graduations be by the classes assisted by other classes of the public schools if need be, and for the parents and friends of all ages and conditions in life who are interested in our boys and girls.

Driven to Suicide.

The Boston Journal says:—Confessing his inability to master the smoking of strong cigars and realizing his mind was being affected by the habit, Henry E. Dunham, an insurance broker with desk on the third floor of the Appleton building, Boston, killed himself by shooting a 32-caliber bullet through his brain.

His body was found by a bell boy in a room at the Revere House, July 14th. From Wednesday afternoon until late Thursday, the movements of Mr. Dunham have not been accounted for. Thursday he went to the Revere House, engaged a room, paid for it and that was the last seen of him alive.

His two brothers, George H. Dunham, president of the Chelsea Board of Control, and Frank E. Dunham, an insurance broker, identified the body. A letter was found written by Henry, dated Thursday, in which he stated the reason for self-destruction. Inability to overcome the cigar habit was given as the cause, and added to it were minute details as to his burial in the family lot in Woodlawn cemetery.

Henry M. Dunham was 51 years old. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Dunham, live at West Paris.

Silence Cure for Nervous Women.

"Many tired society women go to a convent for two or four weeks' rest, to write as much to mend their nerves as for spiritual uplift."

"One of the values of silence is that during the silent period a woman may not tell her troubles, for talking of one's troubles, contrary to the generally accepted idea of its being comforting, is deleterious to the physical constitution. It reduces the vital force and weakens the person who pours her griefs into a friend's ears tenfold more than would the effect of suppressing the grief."

A noted physician never permits a nervous patient's friends to visit her. This is for the specific reason that if they do the patient is free to talk of her troubles, of her physical ailments if she have no other troubles.

The women of Oriental countries do not talk as much as American women, and their beauty is fresher and their tempers more quiet. The relation of these facts are those of cause and effect. When a woman is tired and her nerves are shaken, we order her to rest. The rest we are seeking for her is from talking more than any other thing. Women talk themselves into nervous collapse.

Most cases of hysteria begin with excessive talking. It is surprising with how few words we can get through the day's affairs if we only try.

I think it was Benjamin Franklin who said, "Say only that which will benefit yourself or somebody else." If this rule were followed, we would have fewer cases of nervous exhaustion.

Women talk too much through a strange sense of courtesy and through habit. They have the mistaken idea that a man admires vivacity more than any other quality in women.

That is a mistake. He admires amiability more than anything else, and amiability presupposes repose. There can be no repose when a woman talks from morning till night."

The Compromise.

Harold—This is our dance, I believe, Evelyn—I would rather not dance. Let us sit on the stairs.

Harold—I had counted on the dance. Evelyn—I am sorry, but I prefer the stairs.

Harold—And I prefer the dance. Evelyn—I will compromise. I will sit on the stairs if you will let me put my arm around you.

There never was a better time to test those vegetarian theories.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Camden, N. J.—"It is with pleasure that I add my testimonial to your already long list—hoping that it may induce others to avail themselves of this valuable medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered from terrible headaches, pain in my back and right side, was tired and nervous, and so weak I could hardly stand. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to health and made me feel like a new person, and it shall always have my praise."

Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."

Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors' smart doses are not needed, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

The Martins' Coming Out Party.

We have the finest martin box in town. In the summer when the little birds are first taught to fly, it is the liveliest place I know. I saw a brood of young martins introduced into society last week. It was quite as important a social event as any human debutante's tea could ever be.

All the martins from far and near were invited. I watched them come, neat ones arriving on every gust of wind. The bird house is near the barn, so the top of the barn became naturally the great ball room.

On the roof is a cupola, and on the cupola is a gilded feathered wand, which the martins use for a viewing stand. There were many interesting special features introduced into the evening's entertainment; journeys, winged contests for prizes of admiration, all sorts of races, stunts, and the like. The children, neighboring houses, long flights to the hills and back, soaring ascensions to a far off cloud.

The old birds seemed to be exerting themselves to impress the youngsters, and the new birds exhibited a proper degree of respect and appreciation. They loved the show.

One fine old Beau Brummel of the bird colony, wearing an elegant suit of deep indigo feathers, was evidently a universal favorite, and I fancy I saw signs of jealousy among the young martins not so conspicuously attired. The Beau had the air of addressing the assemblage with "Now, watch me!"

Then he darted off, swept suddenly straight down, caught a moth, turned, and then with the speed of a hummingbird, he disappeared. I thought the wind had blown him away, but as the young birds seemed quite as interested as ever, I suppose he has story of one of his stunts. In a minute there was a flutter of wings over my head like a fanfare of trumpets, and down came the old bird turning back somewhat, his mouth full of bugs which he gallantly presented to the young ladies.

There were many such displays of skill, so many I could not follow them all. There was really too much going on at once. One unfortunate accident occurred, which I will relate though the birds did not seem to take any notice of the affair. It happened very suddenly. There was a foolhardy over-smart young martin, who had been trying all the afternoon to attract attention. Eventually he sailed from a great height straight for the barn at a tremendous speed. He seemed to be dropping down.

All the birds fluttered and whispered among themselves as if they were saying "That foolish young thing is going to show us a lesson. He is sure to be made!" He may have miscalculated the distance or he may have been crossed in love. Who knows? But he struck the lightning rod and impaled himself on it! He must have died instantly. He never quivered; and there he remained until it fell the prey of some prowling cat later on. There was no panic, apparently not even any great excitement among the birds, just a fluttering for a moment, and then the games went on. Martins are so stoic.

They are real philosophers. It seemed a terrible fate to me, but they did not even miss their little comrade, whose bravado they had admired, perhaps—had he ended his brief career.

The sun went down on the festivities. Large clouds were gathering in the west that threatened rain. The oldest birds, more cautious than the rest, gathered their little ones about them, ready to take home. One by one the guests departed, and our little martins retired to their box by the side of the barn.

A few of the younger birds, enamored of the light, will suppose, walked around the globe this afternoon. The twilight fell. The martin family grew quiet within the little bird house, and by and by I saw a young blade making his way, a single cricket, or, as if his thoughts were not all on his flight toward love. Presently he was out of sight behind the trees in the west. Night had fallen and the Martins' Coming Out Party was over.—[Our Dumb Animals.]

An exchange says:—One of the few pleasant features of a Fourth of July is that it happens but once a year.

A Buckfield Boy.

Frank Pierce Merrill died of apoplexy at Dorchester, Mass., on the 9th. He was a native of Buckfield and the second son of the late Thomas and Jane (Field) Merrill, and was born Nov. 19, 1852.

Early in the fall of 1861 his father enlisted in Co. D, 3d Maine Infantry. He was a sharpshooter for a period of three years, re-enlisting in December, 1863, for three years or during the war. Deeming it inexpedient to try and carry on the farm during his husband's absence, his mother rented the farm and in the winter of 1862 moved to Hebron academy for the purpose of giving the children a better schooling. They remained there until his father's return at the close of the war. The family then moved back to the farm, living there until 1889 when the farm was sold and they then moved to Auburn.

After working awhile at the shoe business, Frank decided to learn the printing trade and entered the office of the Lewiston Gazette, then owned by Colonel Waldron.

In 1869, when the National Guard of Maine was reorganized, he became a charter member of the Auburn Light Infantry. He served with credit in every grade from corporal up and in 1880 was unanimously elected captain of the company.

Under his command the company rose to a high degree of proficiency and was considered one of the best military organizations in New England.

In 1883 he resigned his commission as captain to accept the office of commander of the Maine Division, Sons of Veterans. He soon had the State thoroughly organized and in August, 1888, was elected commander-in-chief for the United States.

During the administration the order made rapid and substantial progress and upon his retirement from office in 1889 was presented with a beautiful solid gold Post Commander-in-Chief's badge. He always retained an active interest in the Sons of Veterans. He was a member of Commercial Lodge, No. 37, K. of P., of Boston, and a charter member of the White Mountain Travelers' Association of New Hampshire.

In 1880 he formed a partnership with Allan P. Moore and engaged in the printing business in Auburn. They conducted the business successfully until the fall of 1883, when they sold out and he accepted a position with the well-known wholesale paper house of John Carter & Co., of Boston, to represent the interest in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

During the 25 years that he was on the road he made warm friends among the printers of New England, always the same, cheery and full of fun, but at the same time full of business. A large percentage of his customers were office boys (printers' devils) when he commenced to travel, and by his cheering words and good advice many good printers have been saved to the profession who might otherwise have become discouraged and fallen by the wayside.

Mr. Merrill has not been in good health for over two years although he has continued on duty as traveling salesman.

Mr. Merrill was nearly 57 years of age. He was married and is survived by a wife and son.

The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence, 478 Geneva avenue, Dorchester, Mass.

Value of Eggs as Food.

Eggs are a meal in themselves. Every element necessary to the support of man is contained within the limits of an egg-shell, in the best proportions and in the most palatable form. Plain boiled, they are wholesome. The masters of French cookery, however, affirm that it is easy to dress them in more than 500 different ways, each method not only economical but salutary in the highest degree. No honest appetite ever yet rejected an egg in some guise. It is nutriment in the most portable form and in the most concentrated shape.

Whole nations of mankind rarely touch any other animal food. Kings eat them plain as readily as do the humble tradesman. Far more than fish—for it is watery diet—eggs are the scholars' fare. They contain phosphorus, which is brain food and sulphur. And they are the best of nutriment for children, for in compact form they contain everything that is necessary for the growth of the youthful frame. Eggs are, however, not only food—they are medicine also.

The white is the most efficacious of remedies for burns, and the oil extractable from the yolk is regarded by the Russians as an almost miraculous salve for cuts, bruises and scratches. A raw egg, if swallowed in time, will effectually detach a fish bone fastened in the throat, and the white of two eggs will render the deadly corrosive sublimate as harmless as a dose of calomel.

Eggs strengthen the consumptive, invigorate the feeble, and render the most susceptible all but proof against jaundice in its most malignant phase. The merits of eggs do not even end here. The Alsatians consume fully 38,000,000 in calico printing and for dressing the leather used in making the finest of French kid gloves. Even egg shells are valuable, for allopath and homoeopath alike agree in regarding them as the purest of carbonate of lime.

Midsummer Fashion Notes.

Soft delicate fabrics of silk and wool are in favor for gowns and waists, and in cotton weaves we note linen, batiste, dimity and muslin in variously beautiful styles.

Eggs in all the seasonal color effects, is in prominent favor in varied shades of blue, green, rose color and in white. Parkhill fabrics hold a favored place and are effectively used in charming costumes of distinct and attractive styles; the beautiful color combinations and designs of these cotton weaves have gained for them extensive popularity.

Dainty little house jackets of China and India silks, muslins and batiste, tastefully trimmed with lace and soft ribbons are favorites these midsummer days.

The graceful and convenient Empire and semi-princess styles are more favored as the season advances, and there are many attractive fabrics for these seasonal costumes from which to select; all the supply materials are suitable, among which we note pongee, the soft silks, crepes, cashmeres and lances.

Cheney shows proof foulards are especially desirable for the prevailing modes: fine, soft, beautifully finished, these silks are employed with charming effect in the season's most attractive costumes, and satisfy the wearer both on account of their serviceability and rich and handsome effect. They are a desirable quality of these foulards is a most desirable one, also their noncreasing characteristics.

There are many new and attractive models of the shirt waist this season, and of suitable material, such as chiffon, cotton crepe and Marquise are favored for these indispensable garments; the tailored waists are made of linen and percale in white and colors.

Priestly waives are of great excellence and beauty; admirably adapted to the season's styles; in both the light and heavier grades these fabrics are beautiful products of the loom, holding a place of increasing favor and representing the highest standard of excellence in finest dress materials.

The coat is a prominent feature of summer fashions, either as part of a suit or as a separate garment; in the latter case, silk, satin or light weight cloth are desirable. In handsome models of the Kenmore, the coat is regarded as representing the highest standard of excellence, elegance and utility. They are eminently desirable on account of their "rain-doing" attributes, and easily hold a place in popular favor.

The jumper dress is still in evidence, and many of the new skirt models have jumper attachment; some of the styles are tucked over the shoulders and the edge and arm holes are finished with trimming.

The nine gored skirt is the preferred style, having the front gore of panel effect and showing a graceful adjustment of gores over the hips. The silken lustre, fine texture and attractive colorings shown in "lovely" lacework, give a distinctly elegant effect to a costume made of this popular fabric.

COURT ALICE.

Working Knowing.

In making beef soup or lamb broth add the onions as soon as the meat begins to boil, and there will not be any scum rise.

In cooking macaroni, rise, oyster stew, or milk for a custard, by greasing the kettle with a little butter it will never stick.

Always wash lettuce, cabbage, dandelion, spinach or any kind of green in water with a half cup of salt, and it will bring out the worms if there are any in them.

Cups and dishes which have become brown by constant baking in the oven may be brightened and made to look like new by rubbing them with a flannel dipped in whiting.

After washing lace curtains lay a blanket on the floor in some empty room, spread the curtains on the blanket, stretching them carefully, and they will keep their place without any fastening until dried.

Always make it a rule that the clock is going after you have wound it; it is quite easy to stop inadvertently the swinging pendulum by a little jar given in the winding. This is especially true if the clock is wound in the dark.

For tar spots apply turpentine. Then place the stained goods between blotters and press with a hot iron. Repeat until the stain disappears. Then wash first with and afterward with soap and water.

The New Cent.

All that is wanting now is an order from Washington to put in circulation the new Lincoln cents, coined at the United States mint in Philadelphia. The cents—150,000 of them—are ready for delivery and are in the vaults of the mint awaiting the word.

Ordinarily the announcement of a new batch of pennies from the mint excites no special interest; but in this case, the fact that the Indian chief's head, which has been the familiar adornment of one side of the little bronze coin, has disappeared to give place to a face no less familiar, attracts more than ordinary attention.

There are people who maintain that the "Indian Head" cent is the most artistic specimen of our national currency. By these its implied passing may be viewed with regret. Even they, however, will probably experience a sense of satisfaction that, if the Indian chief's head must go, it is to be replaced by an agreeable substitute as the profile of Abraham Lincoln.

New Laws Now in Effect.

A number of new statutes are now official. Supreme and superior court judges hereafter may be retired after 10 years service and pensioned on half pay. State prison officials will also receive pensions on retirement.

Henceforth the counties into which deputies are sent for the enforcement of the Sturgis law will have to bear the extra expense, instead of the state.

The governor now has power to remove the county attorney for delinquency. Agents of liquor houses are forbidden longer to solicit orders in Maine.

Possessions of intoxicating liquors with intent of sale is to be punished by fine and imprisonment.

The increase taxes on wild lands and public service corporations, and the direct inheritance tax now come into play; yachts and other pleasure vessels, as well as barges, are added to the list of taxable property.

The hours of labor for women and minors are reduced from 60 to 53 per week, employers become liable for the injury of employees. Provision is made for a state board of arbitration.

The duties, responsibilities and authority of the commissioner of labor are enlarged. The law forbidding the use of free passes to public officials is enlarged to include county and municipal officers.

Other acts of consequence authorize the probate system, encourage the propagation of wheat, require the licensing of lunch wagons, change the title of the bank examiner to bank commissioner, provide for better collection of statistics of marriage, provide for the better protection of trees and shrubs, require milk dealers to register with the commissioner of agriculture, regulate the use of cinematographs in places of public assembly, provide for the better sanitary protection of school children, punish the sale of impure milk by a stiff fine and regulate the securing of milk, and exempt public ponds from taxation.

The new laws further direct that power boats be provided with mufflers, allow the appointment of school physicians, raise the standard of fire high schools, modify and improve the law for the state aid to state roads, make punishable by fine spitting on sidewalks or the floors of places of public assembly, provide for the better protection of the people against tuberculosis, increase the safeguards of schools against fire, encourage manual training and the teaching of domestic science and create the office of deputy superintendent of schools, enlarge the powers of the board of prison and jail inspectors, greatly strengthen the provisions for protection against forest fires, regulate the practice of optometry, provide for a state farm for orcharding, amend the statute in relation to savings bank investments, provide for the uniform packing of apples, provide for the appointment of the board of state assessors by the governor and council instead of election by the legislature, and make an entirely new draft of the militia law.

ALBANY.

Rev. J. S. Strong of Limington, Me., who supplied at the Congregational church the Corner sixteen years ago, and who has not been in the place since, gave several a surprise when he and his son came and put up a tent and made ready for some sport fishing. They made some calls on old friends. They soon learned there had been many changes in the inhabitants in the intervening years. Many had died or moved to some other place; also the trout had done the same thing. It reminds us of the sure things to come, old things are soon to pass and give place to new.

The Suspicious Suit Case.

The Gorham, N. H., Mountaineer Says:

"There were more dress suit cases seen in the streets of Gorham Saturday July 3rd, than ever before in any one day in any town in the north country. People came in from the surrounding country in great numbers to get a supply of 'ammunition' with which to celebrate the Fourth, as the saloons were to close for two days. Anyone who carries a suit case nowadays is regarded with suspicion."

Purest Flour

"Of the various qualities of flour obtained from the same wheat, the lower grades are those most contaminated with grease, dirt, and objectionable bacteria; the freedom of flour from these, increases with its purity."

Prof. Wm. Jago, the well-known English chemist.

The purity of William Tell flour is due to the costly equipment and exceptional care to keep the grain and flour clean.

Before grinding, it is cleaned six times.

Neither grain nor flour ever touches anything but the bright, clean surfaces of dust-proof machinery. Even the flour bags are sewed up by machinery.

William Tell comes to you from the mills with all the brilliant bloom that only Ohio wheat can make.

HEBRON.

Another Hebron Boy.

The new superintendent of schools, J. M. Pike, is making good and the whole educational system of Calais is being improved under his administration. This gentleman was formerly superintendent of schools in Livermore Falls, and was equally efficient in that place. He has charge of Baring and Woodland schools as well as those of Calais and may be called one of the busy men of that place.

He was born over in Oxford county. It was among the rugged hills of Hebron where he pulled weeds and built brush fences. In 1886 he came to Calais, Acadia, where he entered Colby college, graduating in the class of 1890. By the death of his parents, leaving him at the age of nine years, his career has been more or less a continuous struggle, teaching school and going to school or college has kept him busy. In 1890 he taught in Paris Hill Academy. At the close of his work in Paris he accepted the principalship of Livermore Falls high school which he held for 12 years.

At the last commencement his alma mater conferred upon him the degree of A. M., as a partial reward for the work he has been doing. His wife, Mrs. M. Pike, is a teacher, and with him has been a teacher, though now she does not teach. One daughter, Arlene, completes the membership of the family.

Besides the immediate families there were present his sister, Mrs. Hannah Billings, and his niece, Deborah Rowe, both of Norway. In spite of all these years and the joys and sorrows they have brought, Mr. Rowe is a bright, intelligent man, able to recite from memory poems he learned as a child, and able to superintend a fine garden.
